Busy day, busy day . . . rushing to accommodate each student's particular needs . . . lending a helping hand to anxious seniors in search of a college . . . planning schedules . . . overseeing college entrance tests and interpreting results . . . setting up class rank and conferring with parents . . . thus the senior counselors have gained the confidence, respect and admiration of students and parents as well as faculty. The patience demonstrated by this pair has endured through many a trying and hair-raising event. Dealing in the present, learning by the past affecting the future, these counselors have touched the lives of most of the students at Harding. To Miss O'Rourke and Mr. Cooley we owe a great debt of gratitude and appreciation for their many years of service and a job well done. To this fine pair, we dedicate the 1964 Echoes.

In recognition of outstanding performance

as students pursue scholastic achievement

Agonizing all-nighters, cramming for exams . . . hours of preparation for class discussion . . . final glances at lab books before the first incision. Before-the-test work pays off when the teacher issues questions. Welders put knowledge to practical use by making drainage pipe for the school camp area.

Step by step activities reach a fun-filled climax

"What are we gonna do tonight?" . . . Rallies before games . . . excitement . . . apprehension . . . action . . . pre-fries . . . rehearsals . . . campaigns. Frantic moments: five minutes before the dance and the crepe paper won't stretch for decorations! . . . "Break a leg," good luck from the director to the cast before going on stage . . . locker room pep talks from the coach to team . . . recapitulation in the team room at half-time . . . bus loads heading for an away game leaving cheering send-off crowds in the background . . . A day before the parade and the float is not painted . . . The work before the play, the dance, events which will determine the success or failure of activities at Harding: let us look behind the scenes.

Every individual has problems and

A faculty of 104 hinders teachers from knowing everyone, but meetings, parties and picnics serve to bring the staff together. Covered dish dinners with an array of delicious food prove teachers are good cooks too. Faculty families meet at informal gatherings. The faculty basketball team challenges intramural champs in an entertaining game giving students a chance to see the more humorous attitude of the faculty. Sometimes instead of a get-together teachers meet to say farewell to a fellow member. After school, students see a different side of the teacher, an informal personality.

DR. SANFORD F. JAMESON

Administrators face new school issue

Crowded schools . . . packed halls . . . staggered schedules . . . transportation tie-ups . . . school ratings . . . These conditions culminated in intense research by the Board of Education. At election time, voters passed issue No. 3 giving administrators the 'go ahead' to begin construction on a high school on the West side. Specifications are being scrutinized by the Board and with the advice of the secondary school teachers, plans are being formulated for a progressive and accommodating school system.

Oliver Jones, Board of Education president, discusses new ideas with: Louis Baughman, Dr. Clyde Muter, William B. Miller, Mrs. I. B. Taylor.

Conferences are held by Dr. Jameson and assistants: O. A. Lovett, business; Wiley Garrett, curriculum.

Principals have interests outside the office

All eyes focus on the backboard as Assistant Principal Louis Swart, Principal A. R. Keefer and Assistant Principal John Frehse join enthusiastic Panther fans in the fieldhouse during an exciting basketball game.

Mary Duck advises M-Z sophomore students.

Bartley DuBois and Allen Shellenberger maintain an extensive occupational file for guiding juniors.

Counseling assumes growing importance

More students . . . more schedule changes . . . more problems . . . overloaded files . . . jammed offices . . . a solution: more counselors advising, guiding, consulting. With the addition of another counselor, six faculty members help with student problems and questions and confer with parents. Vocational choices, college entrance, job applications, test results and interpretation fall into the realm of counselor concern.

Senior counselors Marie O'Rourke and Merrill Cooley will conclude three eventful years with the graduating class.

Personnel changes during year

The full staff which began this year made several readjustments. Mr. Koch entered the math department, replacing Mr. Taft who retired. An increase in Latin students created a position for Mrs. Webb. When Mrs. Calderas moved to Ravenna, Mrs. Anita Leon joined the staff. Mr. Ferkany acceptd a new position, bringing Miss Lucy McCaughtry into the math department.

Few people, other than those involved, know of the fun, jokes or mishaps that occur with projects in the making: the raft that floated away in the Mahoning River during the filming of "Beowulf" . . . the baby who ate brother's term paper which was a result of hours of library work and research . . . attempting to buy dry ice at 11 p.m. Sunday so the Monday morning presentation of Macbeth can have a cauldron boiling and bubbling. Audio-visual operators and the opaque projector are sought when maps and charts are due. Though projects and studies may be forgotten, the behind-the-scenes incidents are remembered and retold.

Practical nursing increases

Practical nurses-to-be wearing crisp red and white uniforms appeared as a first at Harding with the initiation of a vocational course. The first class of 20 are working conscientiously proving the newly organized course a success to assure it a permanent position on the curriculum. Practical training is pursued in the morning at the nursing set-up at the Board of Elections. From June '64 to January '65, clinical training will be done in area hospitals.

ourses appealing to girls

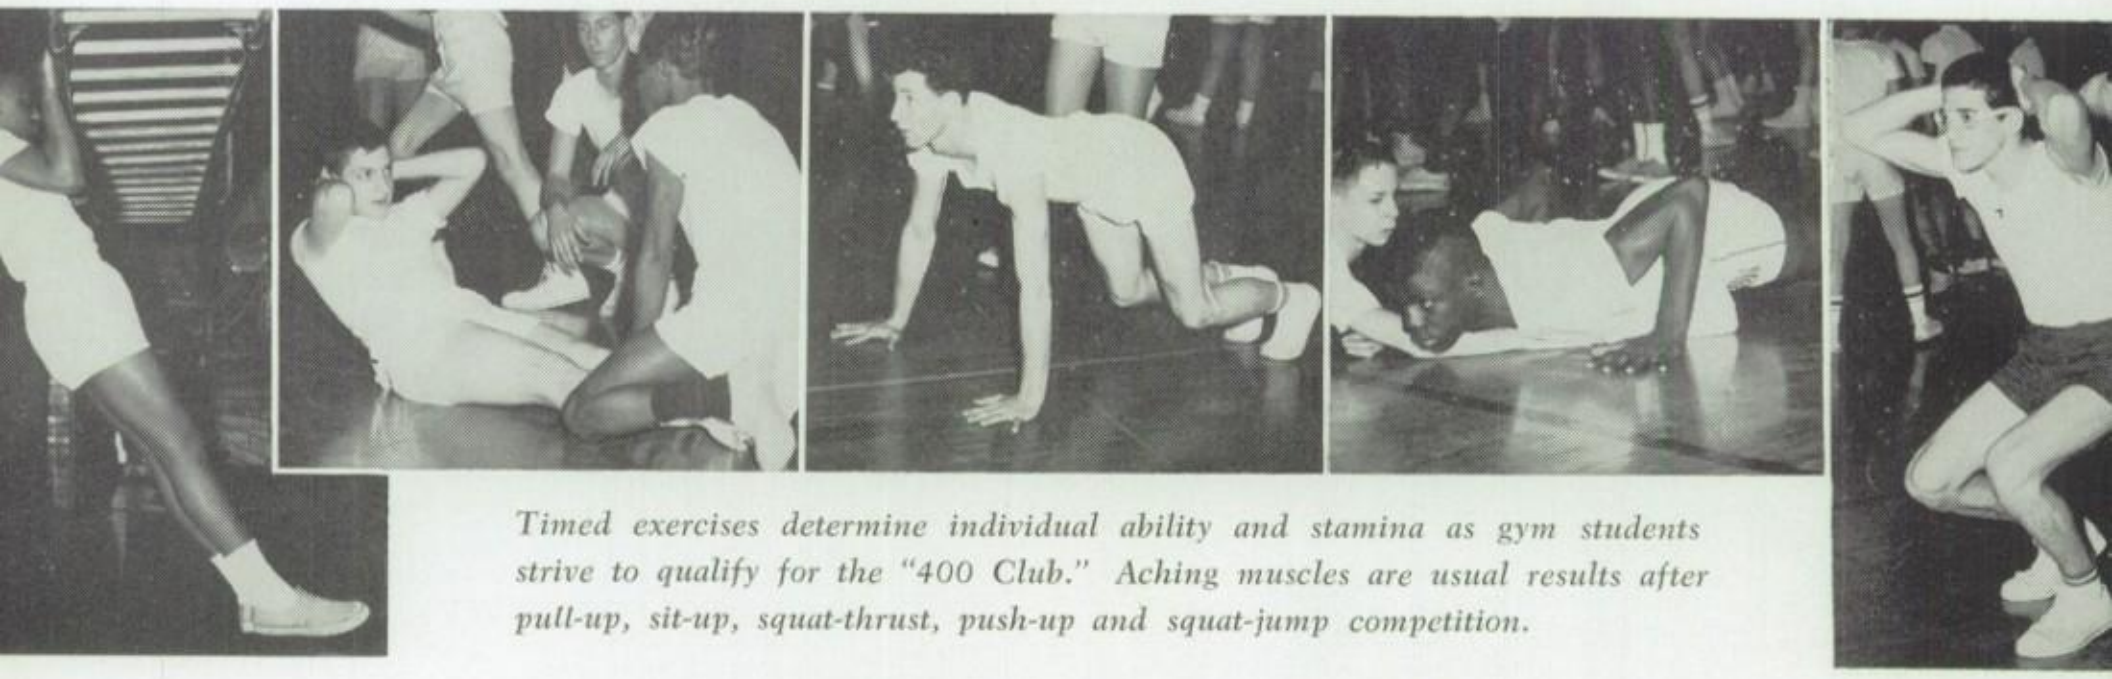
Assembling home furnishing notebooks, Diane Rector and Vivi Kalogeras learn decorating principles.

Home economics courses are expanding to give girls a broader education in this field. Appetizing cooking, home decorating, and fine workmanship in sewing are being taught by varying and appealing projects. Catering, a tea for the faculty, and tailoring a coat or suit are typical activities that help teen-age girls become fine homemakers of the future.

Baking for holiday parties, Marsha Yoas and Karen Westfall transfer cookies to cooling rack.

Choosing material for her sewing project, MaryAnn Beeman examines different kinds of cloth carefully before making a purchase.

Boys in gym strive for '400' club



Timed exercises determine individual ability and stamina as gym students strive to qualify for the "400 Club." Aching muscles are usual results after pull-up, sit-up, squat-thrust, push-up and squat-jump competition.

Nice days bring girls outdoors

Going to the fairgrounds to play passball is welcome change for girls' gym classes.

A Roman seal helps Terry Wyand revive days of Caesar.

Modern problems affect social studies

Civics students speak freely in this informal atmosphere.

A housewife answers questions for Karen Reeder's sociology survey.

A six-week unit for the study of Communism is on the social studies planning board for 1964 - 65 curriculum. The explicit course will be taught in American history classes, a required course for all students. A seven teacher committee outlined the approach to the subject. The basic textbook selected for the subject will be aided by available library books and a series of films and slides.

Typist Rosaleen Aldridge seeks speed and accuracy.

Tape recorders and a Flexowriter, a machine which transfers typewritten material to ticker tape for duplication, mark progress in the business education department. Notehand was also added as a credit course. New equipment and courses and efficient methods prepare business students for after-school employment.

Business education keeps pace with outside world

By using earphones, future office workers get first-hand experience for later jobs.

Music, art encourage expression of talent

"When your Panther has kittens, may I have one?" a five-year-old asked a cheerleader. When the child becomes a Hardingite, he will realize that the mascot does not grow; he is trained. The Panther is but an example showing that activities at Harding do not "just happen." Hard work, new ideas and creativity are constantly needed to plan and execute events. Extra-curricular activities are often a means to an end: backing levies . . . boosting activity ticket drives . . . and joining together at Christmas time to spread holiday cheer and present a seasonal play. These activities make for organization resulting in professional-like productions and successful campaigns.

Student Council attacks problems

Pushing for school improvement, Student Council initiated a behind-the-scenes traffic survey and took student opinions to find the best way to combat hall congestion and crowded stairways. A six-weeks trial run with some one-way stairs kept stairs clearer, easing the between class rush. Student Council keeps in pace with the times and strives to prepare students for adult politics. Monitors, scholarships and a helping hand from Council work for the benefit of the student body.

Rick Lough gives his initial address to the student body.

Every other Tuesday representatives meet in the activity room to discuss and solve school problems.

AFS continues two-way program

"Walk together, talk together" is part of the American Field Service motto which expresses what student ambassadors are accomplishing for their schools in foreign lands. Having had visitors from Norway, Germany, Kenya, and Brazil in the past three years, Hardingites were especially happy to welcome Hellevi Heinanen from Finland for a year's stay in Warren. It was likewise rewarding for Nancy Turner to spend a summer in Holland, where she learned much about the Dutch. Gaining new experiences, meeting diverse situations, sampling new food and learning to understand others bring us closer together.

Two treasures Nancy Turner acquired in the Netherlands are a Van Gogh and wooden shoes.

Training is the initial step in the production of first-rate varsity teams. Vigorous after-school practicing highlighted both indoor and outdoor sports. Football players carried on drills even through the worst weather. Other squads had pre-season workouts in the gym. Behind-the-scenes activities contributed to varsity squad finesse.

Tough practice, strict disciplins build gridiron

Reporting for football practice, Ed Sabo and Roy Serbu check out equipment with manager Paul Varley.

The 1963 edition of the football Panthers experienced a fine start by winning their first three games before tasting defeat. These victories extended Harding's unbeaten string to fourteen games over three years. First Panther victims were the Mansfield Tygers. Tight defense highlighted the evening as Coach Wilson's squad won 14-0. The following week Cleveland John Adams came to town and was whitewashed by an identical 14-0 score.

After enjoying the first open date in many years, the club journeyed to Lima and came away with a hard-fought 14-7 victory.

The following Panther foe was Akron South. Including speedy halfback Sterling Taylor, the Cavaliers had about the same club, which had nearly upset Warren's 1962 team. During the first half, they racked up twenty points and went into the dressing room leading 20-0. The second half was a different story as the Panthers came out ready to roll. They scored twice but fell short on a final drive and lost a heartbreaker 20-12.

In the Alliance game two touchdowns within twenty seconds at the end of the first half lofted the Aviators to a thrilling 32-24 victory.

Harding then came back to wallop a highly praised Olean, N.Y. squad, 38-14, before journeying to the lair of the Massillon Tigers, who were at that time rated number one in the state.

Massillon came out on top 22-8, but they knew they had been in a ball game. The Panthers played their finest game of the season. The turning point came late in the game, until which time the outcome was in doubt.

Harding then opened up its offense and buried Steubenville and Maple Heights in preparation for the big one against Niles.

Tension before the Niles game exploded into a terrific onslaught by the Red Dragons as they piled up points in quest of the state championship. Their defense proved superb as they held Harding to virtually nothing. When the game finally ended, Niles had won 36-0 and with it the state title.

Runners start campaign by four straight

Distance runners started off a fairly successful season with an excellent showing at Liberty. The Harriers continued tallying wins in their next four meets. Harding encountered its season's only tie in a four-team meet with Youngstown Ursuline. The last half of the season was considerably less successful, but the runners managed to make respectable showing in each of the two final tournaments. Four runners finished the two miles in less than twelve minutes. By the season's end thirteen men were given their letters including five from the junior varsity.

Rebounding from an earlier loss to Hubbard, the Panther golf team handed the Eagles their only loss in the league to highlight a very successful 1963 season. Twice the linksmen nipped two of their most feared rivals in triangular matches with Liberty's Leopards and the Niles Red Dragons. By winning each of their last five league matches, Coach Phil Koppel's squad came away with the second place trophy. In two post season tournaments Warren made a respectable showing. Of twenty-seven teams in the Yankee Run Tournament Harding placed third, and scored eighth when District honors were determined at Hubbard.

Pitching produces success

A one-hit 16-0 shutout of Newton Falls in the district tournament climaxed a successful 1963 baseball season. Through fine pitching and superior batting, the Harding nine were able to hold opponents to low scores while keeping the local record running high. Butch Perunko lead the hurlers as he struck out thirty-nine men in seven games. Coach Paul Hughes ended his last year at Harding with a record of six wins and two losses.

Trackmen display number of skills

Jim Keadle's track team experienced a mediocre season in 1963, finishing with four wins and three losses. In Warren's Annual Invitational Meet, Harding placed third out of twenty-five teams. At the NEO District meet in Salem, Warren finished third, this time out of thirty-six teams. With the return of some seasoned veterans and likely sophomore prospects, Coach Keadle hopes for a better record in 1964.

Cagers reach district in tournament play

Even the most optimistic Warren fans were surprised by the Panthers who rolled to an outstanding 16-7 record during the '63 - 64 season.

The team was built around just two returning lettermen, back from Harding's most successful season in history last year. All season the club battled the finest teams in the area and nearly every week spotted the opposition many inches in height. This disadvantage was compensated by an intense desire to win.

Dropping its opener to a powerful Sharon squad, Harding journeyed to Youngstown to down Cardinal Mooney, 60-53. In opening defense of their Big Eight Championship, Warren got by East Liverpool, 67-62.

On the following evening, Massillon, rated third in the final AP poll, came to town and ripped Harding, 79-64 despite a 23-point effort by Dick Androsko. Still reeling from the loss to the Tigers, the Panthers dropped their next fray to Farrell by 25 points.

The Panthers captured their next three contests before trying to dethrone the state's number one team, Canton McKinley. Unfortunately Harding failed to generate any offense and was smashed 65-38.

In the next game, the team began to jell. Led by substitute Andy Knight's 25 points, the Panthers overwhelmed Salem 86-49.

Paced by the shooting of Mike Richetto, Harding won its next two games handily in tuning up for a red-hot Steubenville club. The Panthers again gave away many inches of height to the Big

The next two tussles against Woodrow Wilson and Alliance were broken open in the fourth quarter by the Panther fast break as 71-60 and 80-63 wins were registered.

The cagers journeyed to Canton where they were surprised by Timken 57-47. In the next two contests Harding dumped Niles 64-51 and lost a thriller to Cuyahoga Falls, 57-55.

and copped their second straight sectional title, 67-57.

Action switched to South High Field House for district play. The game developed into a thriller as Boardman put its 16 game winning streak on the line against an inspired Warren club. In the finest game in the area in many a year, Harding saw an early lead dissipate as Boardman tied it and sent it to overtime. Despite 3500 screaming fans, both teams remained calm, and the lead changed hands many times. At the end of the three-minute period the score was again tied. In the second overtime, Harding finally gained the upper hand to win 76-71.

Having to come back after just one day's rest and play for the district championship proved too much, as the Panthers fought valiantly but fell before Woodrow Wilson, 61-56, in the season finale.

Fine offensive attack keeps netmen on top

Facing nine tough opponents in the 1963 season, the Panther tennis team rambled to a five and four record, coached by Tony Marcarello. Out of their first four matches, Harding shut-out three opposing teams, Jackson-Milton, Boardman and Howland, while being shut-out themselves by Massillon. The team was lead by Bill Keller and Carl Vandy with their high scoring in both singles and doubles matches. Juniors took advantage of a once-in-five year opportunity by changing the style of their class ring. They continued to set the pace with the crowning of a junior girl as Winter Sports Queen. Junior class, with the largest number of homerooms in the history of the school, challenged football program sales records and topped them. Sophomores necessitated the initiation of the double shift at at Harding and some of the sophomore class members may complete their senior year at the new Western Reserve High School.

Creativity is key to class projects

In a ten-minute period, a record number of 26 junior homerooms utilize homeroom time initiating plans for the Junior Mix... working on program sales which boosted their earnings to an all-time high... and banding together intramural squads to compete against other homerooms and classes. After devotions, juniors pack the last five minutes with studies, trying to fulfill an ever-increasing scholarship demand.

"What will the Junior Mix decorations be?" reporter Helen Miller asks Barbara Gordon.

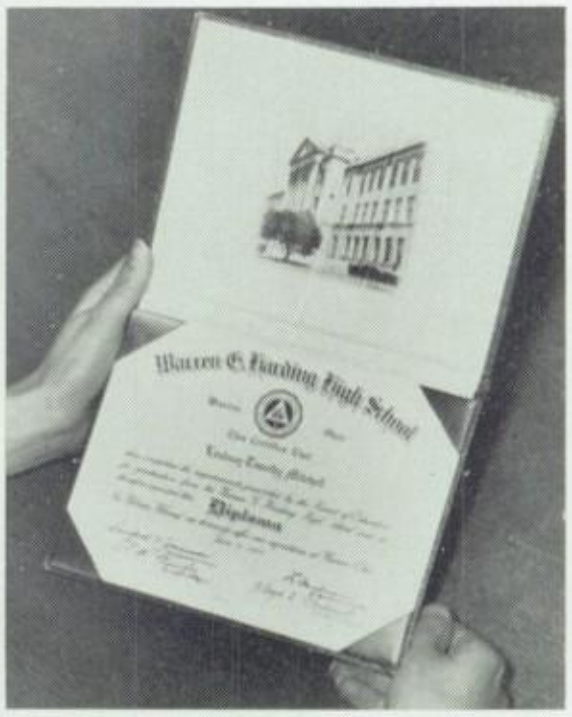
Graduates

Seniors start their year with anticipation, end it in a flurry of excitment and future promise. It's a time for maturity, to plan a career, choose a college, depart from home life, and enter a service. Old friendships will live in letters and Christmas reunions; new ones will be made. But whatever comes, memories of high school life and training will remain and be to the graduates as real as the days spent here.



Enjoying a refreshment break at a football game are senior class officers Richard Androsko, president; JoAnn Pappas, secretary; Susan Capito, treasurer; Michael DiCenso, vice president.

Patrons

Introducing the advertising medium: new businesses and old which have given the Echoes their backing for years . . . and our patrons who contribute to the support of school activities. Our patrons — those student organizations and groups which support the yearbook. In turn, Echoes recognizes them in pictures and copy. Advertisers find their reward in the interest Harding's activities stir in the community. Football games . . . basketball games . . . Frolics . . . plays; all attract. Backing is two-sided for students prove they are good patrons too.

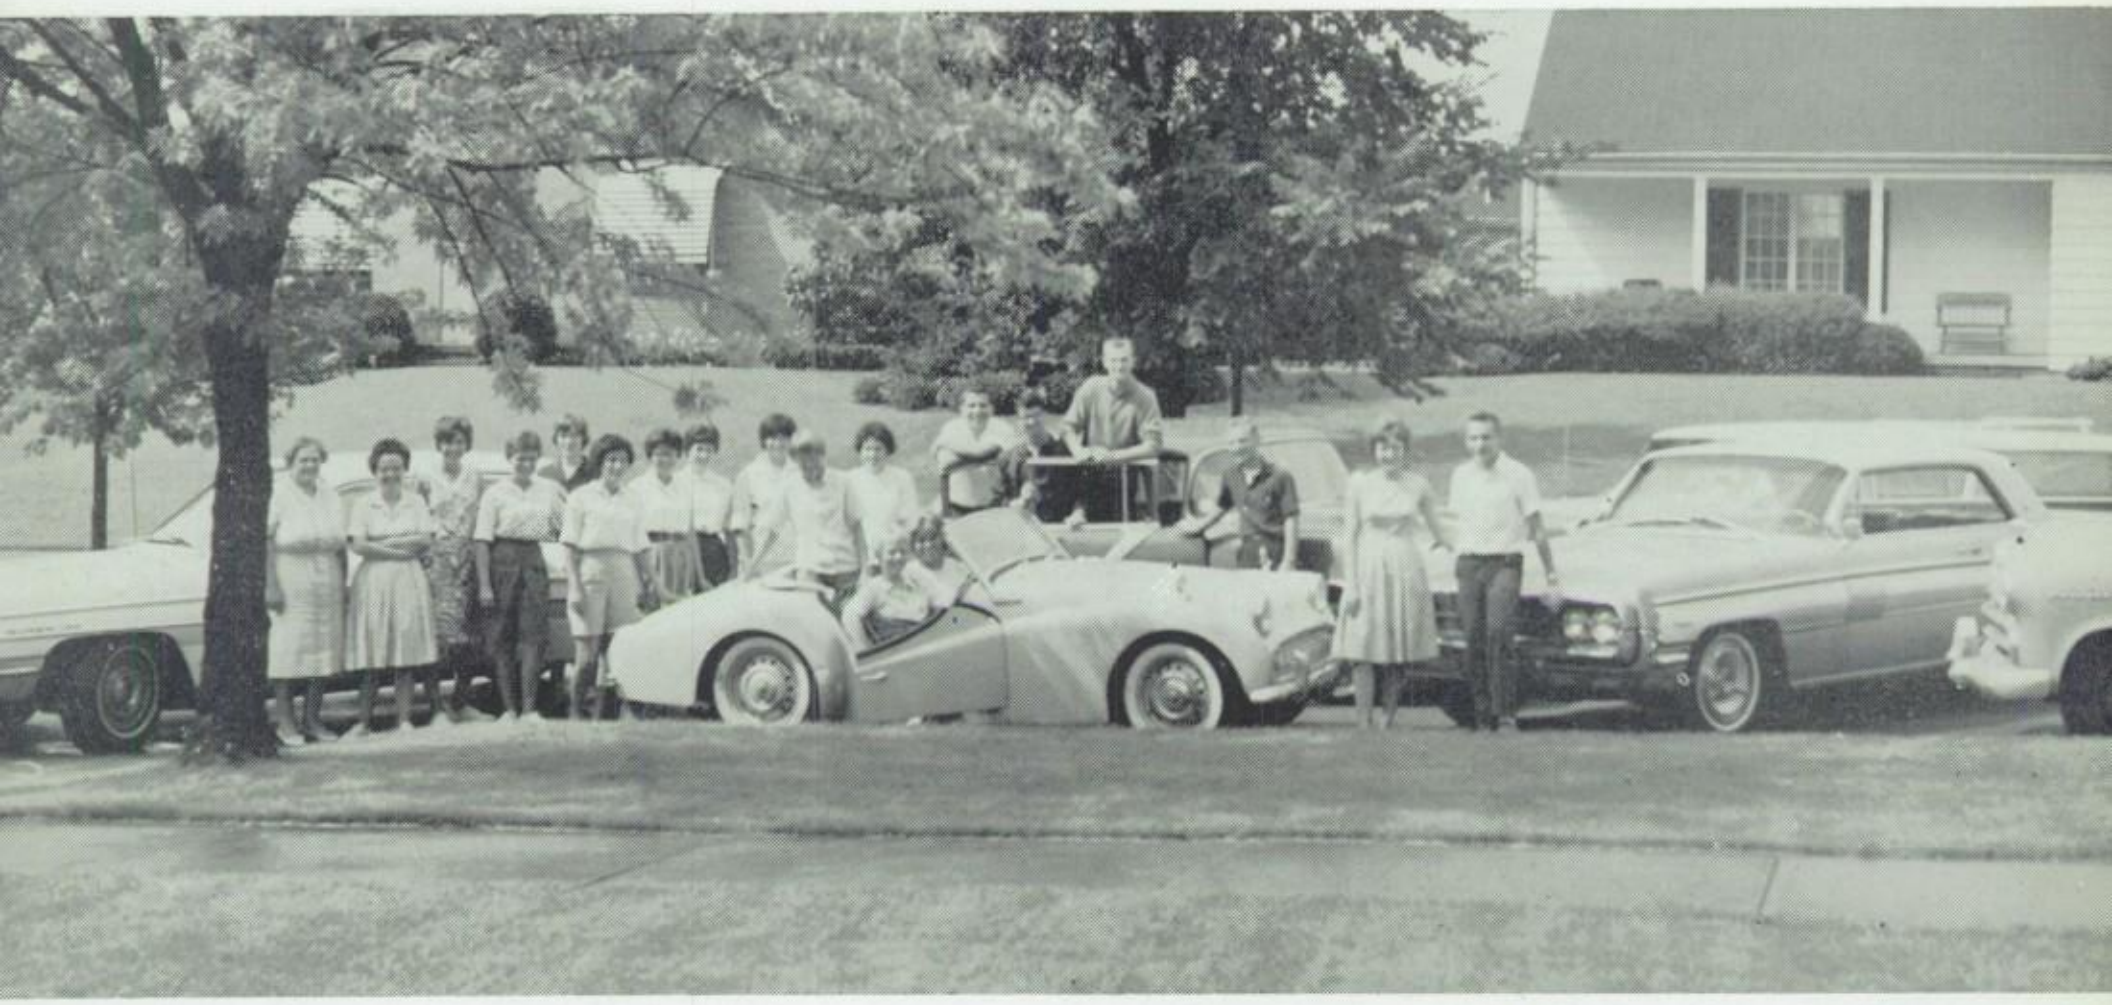
Editor Jan Heller and assistant editor Jane Plotle leave for the print shop with Echoes copy and proofs.

Senior portraits attract Nancy Turner, Abby Schaffer and Penny Jones as Christine Tabacca mounts panels.

Yearbook publication

Getting acquainted with the darkroom, staff members Annette Veits, Sue Braden, Phyllis Edwards and Susanna Lepola watch photographer Bill Evans demonstrate techniques of two types of enlarging devices.



Staff members congregate in the summer sun after discussing preliminary ideas for yearbook publication.

completes a year of co-operative effort

Before the Echoes was off the press last year, plans were being formulated for a new staff and another edition of the yearbook. Terms such as dummy . . . layout . . . copy . . . cut . . . were mentioned briefly when the present staff began meeting. Since then the words have become second nature at the staff worked constantly behind the scenes trying to capture a complete and candid picture of life at Harding.

Senior section and ads occupy staff members Carolyn Flacks, Dale Thompson, Roslyn Rubin, Judi Reisman.

Sports pictures engross George Paidas, Ted Plevyak, Frank Tsantes, David Metzendorf and Michael Rawl.

Barb, was a real swell pal with a quick wit & unique personality!! Always remember the fun we had in T.B.'s class. Take care, Marcia

Joanne:
A very nice guy that I have known for a few years. Best of luck in all your doings and God bless. Kathy '63

Barb,
It's a darn shame we're sitting so far apart. It's funny how you can really get to know someone in such a short time. I'll be friends with you always. Hope you have a swell year.

Yo Squale"

I am very glad that I got to know you this year. Even though it was in Kelly's room. Boy didn't we have some wild times in there? I am looking forward to hard this summer and I hope you are too. Stay as nice as you are and keep smiling. Hasta la vista, se quede buena.

always Ted.
